A Zebra and a Monkey walk into a bar....

Lanikai has taken us to every part of the globe. Being the wood junkies that we are, we cannot resist finding new materials to experiment with. From these travels we came across Zebrawood and Monkey Pod. Each produced a fresh tone unique to the woods distinct resonance capabilities. Unadorned by synthetic enhancements, this series captures the pure essence and beauty of the natural world.

Traditional and anything but.

Koa is the wood of choice for traditional ukulele craftsmen. The crisp tone produced is the prize at the end of the tunnel for many players. This is why we created the NK series with its highly figured natural solid koa top and koa back and sides. However since traditions are made to be broken we also developed the SM series. The difficulties we experienced when working with spalted mango were more than worth the tone that was created.

Banjolele, Banjulele, Banjo Uke... It all means fun.

Popularized in the roaring twenties and thirties, the banjolele answered the call from popular performers for greater volume. From there the unique banjolele tone solidified itself into the lexicon of ukulele music and remains instantly recognizable today.

Designer Series

Viva la difference!

It's the different densities of woods that give us the vast choices in sonic possibilities, but with different possibilities the question arises "What woods would best compliment my style". The softness of Solid Spruce gives a very mellow sound that can handle a heavy strum with ease. The greater density of Solid Mahogany creates more midrange tones and can be very balanced for a wide variety of styles. The relatively hard Cedar creates a bright tone that finger pickers enjoy.

Curly Koa Series

It curls because it can.

Used to make ukuleles for over a century, rare Hawaiian Koa wood is especially prized for its distinctive curly grain. Grown mostly on the big island of Hawaii these woods have a crisp tone unlike any other.
